

New Directory of Health Services

Launches

in Western Sydney

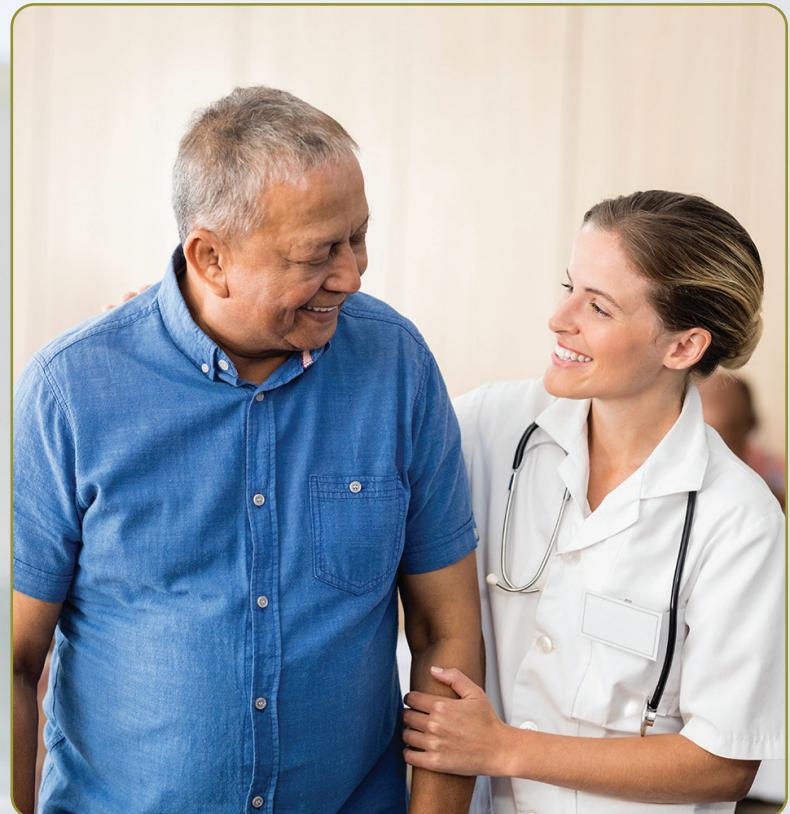

Healthy Western Sydney is a free service directory of health services in Western Sydney, delivered by WentWest, the Western Sydney Primary Health Network.

Healthy Western Sydney currently offers information on palliative care, aged care and dementia services and there are plans to expand to include other services in the future.

Easy-to-read information

The directory contains information on services that is easy to read and user friendly, so that you receive a snapshot of the services offered including:

- Service location and contact details
- Opening hours
- Service delivery mode (i.e. in person, online, over the phone or in-home)
- If there is a cost involved
- Referral information
- If a booking is required

Access other resources

You can also use the directory if you are looking for services such as financial support, transport services, home care mobility and carer support networks, particularly useful if you are caring for a family member or friend.

The directory includes links to additional helpful resources such as the National Health Services Directory, which is a comprehensive, national directory of health services and the practitioners that provide them.

Services tailored to specific community groups

The directory includes search functionality so you can find services for specific community groups such as First Nations or Culturally and Linguistically Diverse (CALD) community members.
